

District Dean of Students Office Faculty and Staff Members' Frequently Asked Questions

- 1. How are student disciplinary incidents reported?

Incident reports are received via the Student Incident Report form located here.
- 2. What happens once a student disciplinary incident is reported?

Once the completed Student Incident Report form is received, it will be assigned to a District Dean of Students Office case adjudicator. The case adjudicator will conduct an investigation and instruct the student to schedule an appointment for a notification conference to discuss the allegation(s). No matter what the circumstances, the incident will be considered an alleged offense until an administrative decision is reached through the student disciplinary process. A student found responsible for violating the Student Code of Conduct will receive an appropriate disciplinary penalty or penalties.
- 3. What is the faculty member's role in the student disciplinary process?

After submitting a Student Incident Report, the case adjudicator will contact the faculty member with additional instructions and to gather more information. The case adjudicator will then coordinate the investigation, meet with the student, and resolve the disciplinary case. Once the disciplinary case is resolved, the faculty member will be notified that the case is closed.
- 4. When can a grade be assigned in an alleged scholastic dishonesty case?

When a faculty member submits a Student Incident Report for scholastic dishonesty (i.e., cheating, collusion, and/or plagiarism), the assignment in question should not be graded and the final course grade should not be entered until the disciplinary case is resolved and the faculty member is notified by the case adjudicator that the case is closed. If the student is found responsible for committing scholastic dishonesty, the faculty member may then assign an appropriate Scholastic Penalty in accordance with their scholastic dishonesty syllabus policy. The faculty member will determine the appropriate Scholastic Penalty, which may range from a grade of 0 on the assignment to failing the course.
- 5. Do minor scholastic dishonesty offenses need to be reported?

It is important to report all incidents of scholastic dishonesty, no matter how minor, in order to follow Collin College policy, uphold the academic integrity of the college, and ensure students are being treated in a consistent manner. A student who commits scholastic dishonesty in one (1) class may also be committing scholastic dishonesty in other classes. Therefore, it is imperative that the District Dean of Students Office be made aware of all incidents of scholastic dishonesty in order to accurately track and respond to every alleged offense.
- 6. What if scholastic dishonesty is suspected, but the faculty member cannot prove it?

District Dean of Students Office staff can assist the faculty member with evaluating a student's work to determine whether a Student Incident Report should be submitted. Resources such as www.TurnItIn.com are also available.
- 7. What is the best way to address students who are disruptive in class?

It is essential for faculty members to articulate their expectations on classroom decorum during the first day of class as well as in the syllabus and reiterate them throughout the semester. Classroom disruptions should be addressed when they occur. Low-level classroom disruptions are typically addressed between the faculty member and the student. However, faculty members are encouraged to contact their program director, associate academic dean, academic dean, and/or the Dean of Students Office if they would like guidance on how to address a specific incident. All incidents should be documented in the event the disruption continues. Recurring disruptions or issues that raise a higher level of concern should be immediately reported to the Dean of Students Office.
- 8. If a student is being disruptive in class, does a faculty member have the authority to ask the student to leave?

If a student's behavior is disruptive, a faculty member does have the right to temporarily dismiss the student from one (1) class session. A faculty member may not dismiss a student from more than one (1) class session without notifying their program director/associate academic dean, academic dean, and filing a Student Incident Report.
- 9. What should a faculty or staff member do if a student has a complaint?

Ascertain what type of complaint the student wants to file, and then refer the student to the appropriate office.

Students should attempt to resolve a complaint regarding a faculty member's performance with the faculty member. If the situation cannot be resolved at that level, the student should be directed to contact the appropriate program director, associate academic dean, or academic dean.

Students should attempt to resolve a complaint regarding a staff member's performance with the staff member. If the situation cannot be resolved at that level, the student should be directed to contact the staff member's immediate supervisor.

Students should seek to settle dissatisfaction concerning grades directly with the faculty member involved. If a grade dispute cannot be settled in this way, students should consult the appropriate program director, associate academic dean, or academic dean. If the issue remains unresolved, the student may appeal to the Grade Appeals Board (GAB). Additional information on the grade appeal process and GAB can be found here.
